

URBAN LIVING SPACES

Vision is nothing but the human eye's interpretation of the refraction of light. Where light touches upon matter, wavelengths are sent into our pupils, which translate them into tangible objects. The reality that surrounds us is all about the way we perceive it: our very eye structures our environment according to what we understand of it. Humanly, we are bound to seek beauty in the world we inhabit. This is why Boffi has joined forces with DePadova and MA/U to redraw the map of home living. Our mission unfolds at the crucial intersection between objects and our perception of them, in the special, potential place of a vision about to embody itself into the ideal living space. Raw, essential materials such as stone, wood and metal are transformed into precious objects; matter remoulds itself to accommodate the shapes of human life, to create unique living spaces tailored to the needs of the people who choose to inhabit them. The publication you are holding in your hands gathers a handpicked selection of our newest design solutions, devised in close collaboration by the three brands belonging to the group: Boffi, DePadova and MA/U. What catches your eye? Discover it with us over the next few pages.

PURE LINEAR SPACE

White sunlight spills in from the tall windows, early at dawn. Picture a room in a house while all its inhabitants are still asleep. The morning bustle is about to kick in, but for a moment still, all is quiet: a pure linear space, where everything exists in perfect balance, in the anticipation of human touch. The delicate geometries of the room arrange themselves in complete silence, preparing to welcome new occupants. The cup will be filled with black coffee, a brown biscuit dunked into white milk. Children will whisper secrets in each other's ear, by the house in the corner. Later, legs will stretch out across one of the sofas, a woman's elbow will brush another's. Later still, perhaps, she will laugh, an electrical spark flying between them like a firefly crossing the room. None of that's happened yet. The day is still whole: for a moment still, all is quiet.

THE DEVIL'S IN THE DETAIL, THEY SAY

The devil's in the detail, they say, and detail beckons the eye in this minimal, perfectly composed space, drawing it to the chromatic subtleties of wood meeting metal, leather and mirrors. Unique details spirit our gaze away, along the hidden curves of this space, tapping out a tune on the piano-key panels of the kitchen, finally coming to rest on top of a double pale moon that hangs in the middle of the room. This is a place of quiet perpendiculars, unpredictable softnesses reaching out to invite us to rest – silver flints, like pixies, sparking off surfaces. On one side, a black quietly ladder ascends to the skies. The devil's in the detail, but so is salvation.

NI CONGHT VER SATI ON

“His room was like an explorer’s den, a lair of furs, the cave of a magician,” writes Anaïs Nin upon entering her new lover’s room, some time in the 1930s. If Anaïs were alive today, it isn’t all too hard to imagine her visiting this contemporary explorer’s den, moving from room to room across these aerial spaces. Today’s home of the adventurer is uncluttered, yet personal: a place in which every memory finds its perfect placement. Oddities are tucked away in the corners – a bird cage, a globe, a hanging constellation; unexpectedly, as you enter the bathroom, you find that the bathtub is shaped like a freshwater pearl. The explorer’s chair, awash in light from the window, invites the mind to wonder in serene contemplation – the attractive warmth of the leather sofas calls for late night conversation. Which is when the explorer’s lover steps in, expectant.

A great man's private life needs not be less interesting than his public. It is in private, after all, that a great mind is best exercised. Rich chocolate leather welcomes us home, to the comfort of these soberly curated quarters, where we are finally able to enjoy a quiet moment of solitude. This is a place one dreams of returning to throughout their busy day: one's own gentleman's club, with its simple, precious luxuries, like reading a book by the window, pouring oneself a drink with a single ice-cube in the middle, or spending a long hour relaxing in the bathtub. Time spent in private runs on its own watch, one that we get to set to our own desires, choosing to kick back after a long day or engage in individual meditation. Knowing there is room enough in our home to host a whole sophisticated cocktail party, but relishing the choice to invite our friends over, or spend a perfect evening alone.

DYNAMIC ENERGY TRAVERSES THE ATMOSPHERE OF THESE WIDE ATTIC ROOMS

This room of one's own has no need for a door: it is a modular space that redesigns itself around you like a musical accompaniment to the different moments of your day. A harmonious equation that's attuned to your wishes: from workplace to studio, open space to intimate enclosure. The rough edges of its chalk white walls and ceilings offer an ideal canvas for the resident artist: her creative touch applies itself to remoulding the surfaces of these pure light spaces. Dynamic energy traverses the atmosphere of these wide attic rooms, as they open one onto the other in sequence, following the natural progression of the sun as it travels across the arched windows. Shafts of light cut across to the centre, from each of the separate living quarters, connecting each point of the space in an airborne geometry of the whole.

C O N S T E L L A T I O N S

Constellations, as we know them, were born out of the human eye's need to arrange space into knowable shapes. The astronomer Carl Sagan famously said, "If constellations had been named in the 20th century, I suppose we would see bicycles." The way we reinvent our contemporary living spaces is up to us. Our imagination has the power of harnessing stars, building a finite system out of infinite chaos of the universe: so is this self-contained environment engineered to encompass several others, revolving around one another like satellites of a complex planetary system. Imagine a living room laid out as the dotted spine of the Milky Way, and an intimate bathroom, coppery and mercurial like a small secret planet: what else could exist in the space in between, what wonderful new landscapes? What spatial conversations happen among objects, as they discuss gravity and the many, diverse relationships that a body can have with another?

A SHADOW PLAY REPRE- SENTATION OF THE WORLD

What if, tumbling down from outer space, you fell, like Alice, through a large, rectangular mirror, finding yourself on our own side of the Universe: finally bound to planet Earth? These rooms reinvent the familiar pattern of human life as we know it. Wood and soft fabrics reconnect us to our need for a fireplace, a stripped down brick wall offers a humble, solid comfort: this is a place we are instinctively drawn to – a place easy to call home. Soft tones of sepia are outlined in solid black, helping our vision to readjust to the intimate pleasures of domesticity. Objects are at rest in the natural light that tumbles in from the high windows, printing the shapes of the city onto the walls inside, a shadow play representation of the world, at large. The house calmly responds in an unobtrusive dialogue of inner and outer spaces, in which each part politely waits for an answer.

CLOSE YOUR EYES AND
FILL YOUR LUNGS WITH THE FRESH
MORNING
AIR

There is a specific quality to the light, as it refracts on the sand early in the day, before human footsteps imprint themselves onto the beach. Come to stand at the water's edge, close your eyes and fill your lungs with the fresh morning air; it's dawn, and the only sounds you can hear are the rustling of long weeds, dry wheat on its stems, gently swaying – in the distance, perhaps, a lone seagull calling. Stand in the middle of this space and feel the sea breeze, softly blowing through the doors of our imaginary beach house, which are left ajar to invite in the new. These rooms are quietly tropical: summer curls at the ankles of each woven chair, ruffling up the leaves of the palm trees. It is a space gently indented with the markings of nature, bearing the signs of early summer, of a busy living pace that is finally relenting. There is plenty of time to rest here, draped across an ochre cushion, or on the white sandbanks of the sofa, or stretched out on the wide bed, limbs tender with sea salt, in the growing heat of the day.

INDIVIDUAL TOUCHES OF LIGHT CROWD IN LIKE FIREFLIES

*"I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows,
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses and with eglantine..."*

Follow Puck, the merry sprite, moving silently through this elegant apartment at night, to experience a contemporary midsummer's dream. Individual touches of light crowd in like fireflies at the foot of a tall tree, to welcome the sylvan creature that seeks a place to rest in this magic forest: on a cream coloured chair, or a milky white sofa, looking up at the tame stars that hang from the ceiling. Tiptoe with Puck from one corner to the other of this nocturnal woodland, peeking through shelves and books, marvelling at its several luminous moons. Mystery emanates from the glow in each corner, finding its way through the clear glass, mobile yet still, like the mirrored surface of water. Run your fingers on the velvetine edge of the bed, hit the light switch: sleep. Perchance dream.
